Medieval Times Art Chalk Talk & Stop and Jot

Activity Summary:

Students will participate in a chalk talk and stop and jot to analyze pieces of art. Through this routine, students will be able to practice incorporating sensory language and descriptive details into narratives. (TI)

Why the Arts:

Through these arts integrated activities, students will analyze clothing in order to differentiate between social classes and opportunity. They will experience and analyze sensory language through art rather than text to increase accessibility to all learners. Students will also have the opportunity to group think before deeper independent thinking. As students practice writing narratives from different POVs, they will also be experimenting with descriptive and sensory language by analyzing various artworks.

Notice and Wonder / Visual Analysis / Chalk Talk and Stop & Jot

Recommended Materials:

Teacher: HDMI Cord, Chart Paper, Markers

Student: Personal Narrative Graphic Organizer / Comic Strip Template / Script Graphic Organizer

Brain Targeted Teaching Considerations:

BT1 – Emotional Climate:

Remind students that this is a safe place to express ideas and that we do not judge classmates during this creative process. Emphasize that spelling is not being graded and students should be open to all ideas.

BT2 – Physical Environment:

This resource comes with 3 visual slideshows. Images should be in full size and visible to all students. Teachers may want to separate desks into groups or divide the whiteboard into equal sections for each group to have a space to work.

Other Considerations:

Teacher Background:

- Teachers need to know the hierarchy of the social classes in Medieval Times.
- Teachers should watch the videos included in the slides for background information on the artist or artworks.
- Teachers should review the Elements of Art chart in the slides.

Student Prerequisites:

- Sensory Language
- Descriptive Language
- Character POV

Accessibility Notes:

- Allow for both group and independent work.
- Make sure to project all slideshow imagery as large as possible so that students with visual impairment are able to see from around the room.
- Give written and verbal directions.
